Greetings,

We are now wrapping up week 6 on compressorbot.com you can access the site at <http://compressorbot.com/development/site/> you can use the username guest and password wfp0212. I wish I had some more exciting news for you this week as in weeks past. I have had some complications with the compressor and decompressor systems which have forced me to restructure from what I had hoped to complete this week. I was not able to complete the connection of the CSSLint and JSLint as expected I started to work on this and found that it would work best if the compress and decompress functionality was at least partially complete. So I have started work on the compressor which has taken a little longer than expected during this week. That all said I believe that we are still on track for launch. I have acquired an upload and download helper so I will not be creating that functionality personally as to save some time. I will include all the required information for the upload and download helper such as copyright information once it is fully online. Thank you again for your continued support and I will continue to work diligently to keep the project on track.
